

OMEGA Press Release

June 16, 2010

The Omega Group Welcomes Ann Carter

The Omega Group is very proud to add Ann Carter to our growing team of experts. Her fifteen-years as a crime analyst yield a real world perspective that will help to further customize our solutions and better meet the needs of law enforcement.

Ann Carter served the City of San Diego in the Police Department as a Crime and GIS analyst from 1995 to 2010. While a crime analyst, she helped patrol officers and detectives determine crime patterns, identify suspects and allocate staffing. Ann also streamlined unit processes to better allocate resources. Most recently she utilized our CrimeView solution and Crystal reports to save significant time and resources for the San Diego Police Department.

Ann earned an M.B.A, from San Diego State University in 1994 specializing in work processes and completed her Bachelor's degree in Marketing Research in 1980. She has received numerous awards and citations throughout her career including the CCIAA 2008 Member Award for streamlining data collection and presentation to enable more time for analysis and the Exceptional Performance Citation from the Chief of Police after completing a major project to convert the geographical data within the Department's computer systems to 2000 census geography. This project was necessary to continue support of the Department's neighborhood structure for critical operational needs such as CAD and ARJIS as well as providing information and statistics by census tracts, neighborhoods and other reporting areas.

Ann plans to use her work experience, educational background, and Omega Group solutions to help other departments manage their public safety data so crime analysts and officers have more time to analyze the information gleaned to fight crime.
