Dear Jeremy Hamm and the Omega group:

Last week, I had an agency call me because they were looking for a female suspect. They had an idea of the first name but not an exact spelling. With our RMS program, we need to have either the time of the incident, incident number or name to search for information. Then I thought, "Hey, let's use the crime mapping software". I telephoned the other agency back and asked him what the person was arrested for.

Since the agency didn't know exactly when we'd arrested her; I ran an query in CrimeView for the related crimes over last two months. Then, I went to our records system and ran the case numbers that CrimeView gave me. Amazingly, I found the person they were looking for! I was then able to send them the information on her whereabouts, her associates, and a photo of her from our records program.

CrimeView allowed me to search the records quickly and even with running through the case numbers, I had information to the other agency within an hour.

I was impressed.
